THE NORTHERN PINE.

A lonely pine on a northern shore;
The blue sky laying the sands below;
The homelands breezes blowing o'er,
And the white-winged sea-gulls circling slow.

A yard where the ax and the mallet ring
Through the busy course of the summer days;
A stately ship, like a living thing,
That leaps to the ocean down the ways.

A shadow of black on the ocean path;
A brazen cast in the tropic sky;
A typhoon loosing its awful wrath;
A ship that is shattered while brave men die.

A battered spar, by the currents spurned
Which has floated far on the surging main;
A sandy beach where the tide has turned,
And the northern pine is at home again.

—Youth's Companion.

The Claim Jumpers

Ben Hollowell was returning to his claim. He had been to "Frisco" for a month trying to induce some one with means to "grubstake" him, but had failed. This was not because he did not have a good claim, but because the capitalist he met did not care to look into it. Ben was very gloomy. A year before he had married the girl of his choice in the East and a week after his marriage had returned to his mining operations. He had hoped before this to bring his Susie to him, but the fates had been against him. And now his failure to secure means with which to prosecute his work made him doubly despondent.

Before him, coming on horseback, the broad grin of his old friend, the one with whom he had been in the East, he recognized as Andy Kitchen, the owner of a claim not far from his own.

"Howdy, Ben!" said Andy, greeting affably, and without lessening his pace added, "Yer claim's jumped."

"What's that to laugh at?" called Ben, sharply. "How many of 'em?"

"Two. But one on 'em I reckon you can handle without trouble. It's a little cuss. 'Fother may down you!"

Ben would have asked more questions, but Kitchen seemed to be in a hurry and rode on. Here was more trouble. Ben was a peaceful, plodding man, beloved by his neighbors, and the last man in the world to fight except for his rights. But he was not a man to suffer imposition. Besides, he had strong faith in his "hole in the ground," and relied upon it to unite him in time with his beloved wife. He rode on, considering what he should do. He had no faith in peaceful measures, for claim jumpers were not respecters of justice and usually did not jump a claim unless prepared to maintain their ground. He finally concluded to reconnoiter the jumpers from a distance and watch for a good opportunity to catch them apart.

It was about 10 o'clock in the morning and a bright summer day when Ben left the road and struck a trail through a wood which led to his claim, now but half a mile distant. The birds were singing in the trees and everything about him was so peaceful that he approached the encounter before him with still greater reluctance. His young wife was ever present in his thoughts, and he could not dismiss a picture of her anguish if it were fated that she should hear that he had been killed by the jumpers. After going as far as he dared, he dismounted and proceeded on foot, pausing behind a tree in sight of his claim and his cabin beside it.

There was no one about, but the cabin door stood open, and smoke issued from the stovepipe chimney. Between two trees swung a hammock. In the center of which was a bundle. Ben eyed all this cautiously, listened till he was convinced that there was no one present, then boldly went forward. Curious to learn what was in the hammock, he pulled apart its sides and revealed a lot of blankets. But as the blankets contained something he pulled aside a corner covering one end of the bundle and revealed—

Well, what Ben revealed was no more striking than the expression of his face on seeing it. The stern look he had worn up to this moment melted

MILLION DOLLAR FUNERAL FOR DOWAGER EMPRESS

MAKING A VESSEL OF SMOKE FOR A DEAD EMPRESS.

We here reproduce a photograph showing the burning of a gorgeous boat specially built, according to Chinese custom in royal funerals, to convey the spirit of the late Dowager Empress of China across the mystic river beyond which is believed to lie the heavenly Nirvana. The boat cost about $40,000. On the bow stood a huge figure representing the guiding spirit of Heaven, and just behind it was the imperial yellow chair. On the deck were four pavilions, the first containing effigies of some twenty-five court ladies of her majesty's train, the second a number of robes actually worn by the Empress, the third effigies of priests and the fourth the imperial throne. The entire funeral expense was nearly $1,000,000.—Illustrated London News.

into one as kindly as, or more kindly than, had ever rested on his features. He looked down into the face of a sleeping baby.

For a time the diminutive creature slept on, then began to stretch its little legs and fling its little fists about, at last opening a pair of blue eyes, which it fixed intently on Ben.

"Reckon you're the little jumper," said Ben, giving the baby his finger to clutch. "I hope the big one is no more formidable. If your dad has taken my property I don't see how I can have the heart to dispossess him."

By this time Ben was on his knees beside the baby, making all kinds of grimaces and saying all kinds of ridiculous things to show his good will and attract the child's attention. Then a sudden thought struck him. He remembered Andy Kitchen's grin when he announced that the claim had been jumped.

"By thunder!" he exclaimed. "Suppose the big jumper is a woman!" For a moment his face fell. If this were so, what an uncomfortable situation! Even the shooting he had expected was not so bad as that.

He was so engrossed with this thought and the baby, in whose face he fancied he could see trace of something pleasantly familiar, that he did not hear a footstep approaching. Then he felt a light touch on his shoulder. Instinctively his hand flew to his revolver as he turned.

He looked into the smiling face of his wife.

There are certain scenes as well as emotions that are indescribable. Neither the scene nor the emotions in this case can be painted in words. Never was man more completely turned from the passion of strife to that of love. There was one long embrace that it seemed would never end, then a gradual relinquishment after that explanation.

Susie had prevailed upon a relative to furnish means with which to prosecute Ben's claim, besides funds to enable her to take them to him herself. A letter telling him of her intended journey had arrived the day after his departure for "Frisco." Susie on her arrival, finding him gone, quietly took possession of his cabin and waited his return. When he came she had gone for water.

Ben's claim turned out a bonanza. In time he organized a company to work it, and he called it the Little Jumper—Grin.

MISUSE OF WORDS.

Correction of Wanton Abuses Should Begin in Grammar Schools.

Those who find a never-ending pleasure in reading the works of Goldsmith, Addison, "Reluctant Dick" Steele and our own genial Irving must suffer something like literary nausea in turning over the pages of some modern newspapers in quest of news, the Buffalo Commercial says. Why should the society editor insist that a wedding "occurred," instead of taking place? But this abuse of the word seems venial when we turn to the sporting page and find that every event recorded from a dog fight to a running race is "classy." It may be assumed by some critics that this word flashed upon the sporting fraternity as a great prize through the revival of the Olympic games. Greek authors wrote books now known as classics, and by the same token their athletic games obtained a like designation. But why should a prize fight be called "classy"? Probably the word is a slangy equivalent of "high class." At any rate, it is illegitimate and of offensive as "brainy."

But the offending is not confined to the editors of sporting pages. To go through the catalogue of misused words would far exceed the limits of any editorial article. Yet one can hardly leave the subject without recording a solemn protest against the phrase "armed with a warrant," or the aeronaut who "negotiates a trip" around the aerodrome. And one would like to add that "inaugurate," which means to induct in office, does not happily characterize the running of a new railroad train or the opening sale of autumn millinery.

The colleges of America are doing good work in their departments of English literature to prevent the war-torn misuse and abuse of our magnificent language, but the education should begin in our grammar schools, where the great majority of our children receive their only education.

He is a Genuine Highland Chief.

King Edward is about to start on his round of country house visits for shooting, writes a Londoner. The most interesting of his majesty's hosts from every point of view is the Mackintosh, of Mackintosh, laird of Moy Hall, Scotland.

The Mackintosh's ancestry is like a page of Scottish Chiefs, so closely connected is it with the history of Scotland in ancient days. The Mackintosh is one of the few genuine Highland chiefs of purely Celtic descent in the male line. His ancestry goes back to the invasion of Irish Scots from the north of Ireland, which destroyed the original inhabitants of the Highlands—the Picts, the Romans called them—because they painted their bodies—and altered the name of the whole country north of the Tweed.

He is the chief of the Clan Chattan, which ruled for centuries over the greater part of Inverness-shire and Aberdeenshire, including the great forest of Bannoch. As befits his ancestry, the Mackintosh is very tall, with long, aquiline features, and a drooping yellow mustache. He wears the kilt and sporran of his clan, a skene-hu (knife), a dirk and a Highland cap. In this costume he will greet the King.

Electric Dyspepsia.

A scientific man in Buffalo proclaims that he has discovered that working about high-voltage electric apparatus results in "grave disturbances of the digestive organs, loss of appetite, distress after eating" and a whole train of dyspeptic symptoms.

Dating Her Far Back.

Miss Passeligh—I have had my picture taken once every year since I was 10.

Miss Youngthing—Oh, do let me see one of those old daguerotypes. They're so quaint.—Boston Transcript.

Too Rich.

The Cannibal Chief—This fellow, you're eating now, your excellency, was a Pittsburg millionaire. The Cannibal Chief—Well, I find him altogether too rich for me.

If you have a good friend don't spoil it all by imposing on him.

CHOSEN PEOPLE OF AMERICA.

Westerners Have Heritage of the Best Blood of Other Sections.

The west—what a heritage the word implies! Here is the best blood of New England, of the middle states, and of the south. Here are the sons and daughters of the revolution and of the wars of human freedom. Here, too, have come the sturdy sons of northern Europe, toilers of the workshop and plow, descendants of the hardy Germanic races who cradled modern democracy in the forests of the North Sea and the Danube, or brothers of those who still fight for home rule for Ireland. In short, says the article by the late ex-Gov. John A. Johnson in the World's Work, the God of American destiny has by selective process visited the best races and the best states and countries of the earth, and wherever he could find souls filled with courage and self-reliance, hearts yearning for freedom and a home, hands eager for hard work, eyes open for opportunity, and shoulders prepared for responsibility.

And what natural resources the builders have found ready to their hands! Gold and silver, iron and copper, coal and oil, forest and pasture ranges, valley on valley of the most fertile soil that ever enriched a thrifty settler or brought prosperity to a nation—these are among the resources that, touched by the hand of toil and the genius of American science and capital, have brought forth in the valley of the Mississippi and on the Pacific slope industrial achievements without parallel in the annals of the human race.

Marvels of actual achievement stand out in bolder outline because of the early eastern pessimism. It is scarcely half a century since the leading agricultural journal of that day doubted the ability of the prairie soil of the middle west to produce profitable crops of wheat, oats and corn. To-day the west produces two-thirds of the grain crop of the United States; enough to feed not only its own population but a large part of the east. The income of the west from this season's grain crop alone exceeds the total income credited by Mulhall to Great Britain for the year 1822 from all industrial resources combined.

BACK TO THE RIVER.

Changes That Are Taking Place in Western Transportation.

Forty years ago when newspapers chronicled daily the arrival and departure of the boats that plied between St. Louis and Omaha, there was only one railroad—the Hannibal and St. Joseph—save one branch of no great importance. Freight charges were high for river carriage, and the people looked to the railroads for relief and expedition. Eventually they got what they wanted, and now the people are calling for boats and praying for relief from the railroads. Collier's says. Few of the contemporary history are more interesting than that Kansas City is going back to the river where it started. There will be no more "dinky" little side-wheel river boats. It will have a long craft of steel with watertight compartments, great freight-carrying capacity and low superstructure. When the boat had been decided upon last spring, Walter S. Dickey was chosen to take charge of the project. A stock company was formed. Two years ago Lawrence M. Jones, a merchant, organized a boatline company and navigated the Missouri successfully for a season with small boats bought by contributions. Mr. Dickey decided to make the boat line pay dividends. To this end he obtained freight contracts from shipping interests guaranteeing a satisfactory return on an investment and then called for stock contributions. The first man to respond was William Rockhill Nelson, editor and owner of the Star, who took $50,000 of the issue. One after another the successful men of business subscribed for stock until to-day more than one-half of the necessary million has been disposed of. Every man in Kansas City, important or obscure, if he owns a home or pays taxes of any kind, will be asked to buy stock in the boat line. The company can get its million, but it is hoped to have every man interested. Kansas City's population this year is more than 375,000. It has grown 25,000 a year for two years. If it could make that record with oppressive railroad rates, what can it do in ten years with water competition? It is not hard to understand the importance of a boat line, when you hear that Minneapolis and St. Paul have an advantage over Kansas City—although they are further west from New York than Kansas City—of $6.40 per ton on first-class freight. This makes an enormous saving in one year for these cities over Kansas City.

Benefit of a College Education.

"This is your son's third year at college, isn't it?"

"Yes, and he is doing really splendid work."

"Mental or athletic?"

"Why, he poses for all these pictures of perfectly dressed young men in the clothing manufacturers' circulars."

"Cleveland Plain Dealer."

No Need.

"Bobs writes a good deal of fugitive poetry, doesn't he?"

"Yes, and I wonder why, for nobody seems running after it."—Baltimore American.

Richmond people may soon all be able to ride in pullmans—the location of the Pullman Car Works being suggestive that Richmond is soon to be pullmanized.

Richmond continues in the forward movement: the Santa Fe has inaugurated a motor car service to Oakland; the Boulevard will progress; the north-west ferry from West San Pablo to Point San Pedro will all be put through in 1910.

There is some one in this city who once stopped his subscription to the Terminal because the editor criticised an official negligence of a previous city administration. After the completion of Macdonald Avenue the grade of the old survey shows on several side streets, "a peculiar artificial elevation," as an individual expressed it. The slope south from Macdonald avenue would carry off much of the water by a simple cut across Bissell avenue on the old grade survey and the cuts would make the fills. A petition was signed by the property owners to have the grades as near the surface as possible, but this was never acted upon, but instead the work of construction of First, Second, Third and Fourth streets were carried through on the original specifications and Mr. P. Owner felt considerably ignored by his representative elected to office, who belongs to the same category and sits in the same pew with that apparent "uncompromising" who first suggested that it would be a bright idea to have thirty feet of sidewalk on thirty feet of street bed on each Bissell and Nevins avenues. Our people do not feel like having more street work done, until some of the other councilmen move and second the more important motions. Will not Councilman Give-a-Dam Jones make a motion once in a while or it may take several phonographs to explain the errors.

RUSSIAN'S ODD WAGER.

The Eight Different Methods of Locomotion by Which He Won.

A man named Duboroff has just won a highly original wager at Kief, says the St. Petersburg correspondence of the London Evening Standard. He had undertaken to appear daily during eight days in the streets employing each time a different mode of locomotion.

He commenced by running down the steps of his dwelling and along the boulevard on his hands. The following day he hopped through the town on one leg.

Stilts, a skipping rope, roller skates and a bath chair all followed in turn. One day he was conducted through the principal thoroughfares by a small boy who led him on a string.

The finest of his exploits was undoubtedly a recent performance, when, turning successive somersaults in the air for nearly a mile, he arrived amid enthusiastic cheers at the cafe where his friends were waiting to bestow the prize upon him.

USED 1,500 YEARS AGO.

Modern Methods of Healing Known to Ancient Tibetans.

The Russian government recently received a petition from the Siberian Buddhists requesting that medical sciences should be established among them in which the ancient Tibetan art of healing should be taught. In consequence of this strange petition the Medical Academy of St. Petersburg has been making investigations concerning the claims of the ancient Tibetan art of healing.

A Tibetan handbook in medicine which was known and used about 1,200 years ago and even then was regarded as an "ancient" and venerated source of knowledge, was used as material for the investigation. The Russian academicians have thus made the astonishing discovery that this book described drugs and cures which European physicians "discovered" many hundreds of years afterward.

Thus the doctors of Tibet so many centuries ago were not only acquainted with the secrets of the entire human anatomy—how many bones there are in the human body, etc., the principal nerves, namely, ninety-nine—but knew that the skin contained 11,000,000 pores. According to this venerable book, "the heart is king of all the organs and the support of life." "Sickness in general originates owing to the evil and ignorance of human beings. All evil thoughts have a harmful influence on the heart and liver."

It is now known that 1,500 long years ago in "mysterious Tibet" physicians diagnosed the condition of the ill just as do our physicians of today—by feeling the patient's pulse, looking at his tongue, etc. Among the "remedies" they recommended were not only vegetable diet, baths, compresses, but also massage and cupping. What is more remarkable is that physicians who did not keep their instruments quite clean were severely punished. The ancient Tibetans were in this respect extremely modern. The old Tibetan medicine book prescribes that healthy persons should live in orderly, sensible manner of life, avoid all excesses and irregularities and keep clean both soul and body.

ODD TRAINS.

Are Roofed with Water and Fitted Out in Strange Ways.

What use is a balloon to a railway carriage? Few of the latter are so fitted, but there is at least one running on a mountain railway near Salzburg which has a balloon attached to it in order to assist it up the steepest portions of the line. At the summit a tank below the car is filled with water sufficient to counteract the upward pull of the gas bag, which the vehicle thus drags down with it upon the return journey.

There is only one car in the world with a window fitted as a royal autograph album. It is a somewhat ancient railway saloon used in Denmark for the conveyance of royal visitors. It has become the custom of these to scratch their names on one of the panes, which now shows the autographs of King Edward and Queen Alexandra among others, including those of the late Czar, the late King of Denmark and the late Duke of Clarence.

Another uniquely fitted railway carriage is that containing the vestibule entrance to the train belonging to the German Emperor. This vestibule holds several fine statues—an innovation which has not been copied elsewhere, though many royal trains carry superb paintings as part of their decorations.

A car with a complete veranda is another novelty introduced in the train constructed for President Diaz of Mexico, where the drawing-room portion is surrounded by such a fitting.

Very few trains are roofed with water, that of the Viceroy of India being among the small number. All the vehicles, eight in number, have double retilines, which are really water tanks, holding about five tons of water. This arrangement contributes toward coolness and furnishes water for domestic purposes on the train. The train carries sixty personal servants when the Viceroy uses it.

On the long-distance lines in Russia each of the important trains has a car above which rises a little belfry containing a chime of bells. Otherwise the latter vehicles are fitted as chapels in charge of a regular priest of the North Orthodox faith.

Tragedy.

With dignified gait and head erect the woman descended the front steps and proceeded slowly down the street. In one hand she held a hatbox, in the other a large paper bundle, and in her eyes was a light of battle.

The man ran distractedly after her. "Come back!" he cried. "For heaven's sake do not leave me thus."

But the woman turned upon him with a withering glance of scorn, and the corners of her mouth dropped contemptuously.

"You don't know what this means to me," the man cried, in a frenzy of despair.

But in vain. Her retreating figure had turned the corner, and the woman, deaf to his entreaties, was now out of hearing distance. The man reentered the house and threw himself upon a divan.

"What is to become of us?" he groaned. "Our cook has gone!"

Justice and Lucere.

A man presented a check one day for payment. He was a stranger. His evidence of identification was not satisfactory to the cashier.

"Why," said the man, "I've known men to be hanged on no better evidence than this!"

"Very likely," replied the cashier. "But when it comes to letting go of cold cash we have to be mighty careful."—Browning's.

A Merger.

Regular Customer.—There used to be two or three hair bald spots on the crown of my head, away back. Are they there yet?

Barber.—No, sir, it ain't so bad as all that. Where those spots used to be, sir, there's only one now.

PRINCE WORKED IN SLUMS.

"Father Max" Gave Up Royal Luxury to Live Among the Poor.

It will be no news to many a poor man and woman in London to hear that "Father Max," as he was affectionately known by them, or to give him his full name, Prince Maximilian of Saxony, has developed consumption and, in order to save his life, has been ordered by the doctors to leave his London and take the open air cure, a London newspaper says. For four years he worked devotedly in one of the poorest parishes of London, this being the scene of his labors after his ordination.

In violent contrast to this were the earliest years of his life. He is a brother of the present King of Saxony and began his career as a lieutenant of the Saxon guards. But court life was thoroughly distasteful to him, being always a serious-minded man and inclined rather to study and meditation than the activities—of worse, the idleness—of mock soldiering. He inherited a deep religious feeling from his mother, the Archduchess Louise Aniollette of Tuscany, and when he was turned at the court of Saxony to disgust and depress him. His brother, King Frederick Augustus, married the unfortunate Archduchess Louise of Austria, whose divorce and subsequent matrimonial affairs occasioned so much scandal, and one can guess how glad the young prince would be to cut himself loose from such surroundings.

He, therefore, threw up his commission in the guards and began his studies with a view to entering the Roman Catholic church under Bishop Von Leonard of Bavaria, and was ordained in 1896. When he took up his work in London the late Queen Victoria, although a strong Evangelical, showed her approval of the life he had chosen by presenting him with a gorgeous set of priestly robes. This is the more remarkable as he was an extremist in his religious views.

In 1901 he was called to the chair of theology in the University of Fribourg, Switzerland, where he has lectured on this subject until this late development has put a sudden stop to his work. In 1903 he was made archbishop of Olmutz.

Prince Max is still on the sunny side of 40; he is tall and has an earnest face and a strong, resonant voice which lent much charm to his preaching.

Recipe for Catarrh.

The only logical treatment for catarrh is through the blood. A prescription, which has recently proved wonderfully effective in hospital work is the following. It is easily mixed:

"One ounce compound syrup of Sarsaparilla; one ounce Tonic compound; half pint first-class whiskey." These to be mixed by shaking well in a bottle, and used in tablespoon doses before each meal and at bedtime. The ingredients can be gotten from any well stocked drugstore, or he will get them from his wholesale house.

His Idea of Appendicitis.

Dr. Pond, of Liverpool, England, has advanced a new theory with reference to the origin of appendicitis and other disturbances of the digestive organs. He calls attention to the fact that such ailments can often be attributed to antimonial poisoning, and the source of the antimony taken up by man is said to be the rubber rings which are frequently used to close all sorts of bottles.

Dr. Pond has established the fact that such rings consist of almost one-third their weight of antimony. The antimony is not only dissolved by the mineral waters containing alkalis and organic acids, but these rubber rings, as daily observation shows, soon become brittle and some of the compound falls into the contents of the vessels.

Dr. Pond claims to have found that a frequently repeated introduction of antimony can become the source of a series of disturbances of the nutritive and digestive system, especially through continued weakening of the muscles of the stomach and intestines.
